

There's a time to be exciting and interesting and there's a time to be BORING! Sometimes we want to be the most exciting thing in a child's world so they interact with us and think we are important. Other times we want them to make a speedy and successful transition and the easiest way is to reduce any extra stimulation and that includes us being "wonderful" and giving reinforcement for their behaviour such as refusal, attention seeking or enjoying the delay. So...use that "BLANK FACE" and be boring so they do the transition better. Be quiet!
