

11th May 2018

Hello!

I hope that you all enjoyed the lovely, sunny bank holiday! I am hoping that the sun keeps on shining for us next week as Robins, Wrens and Bluebirds are planning a street party style extravaganza to celebrate the upcoming royal wedding! We are thinking music, party games, bunting, flags and some scrummy treats! We will certainly get the Wedding of the Year off to an excellent start!

This week, we have continued to have fun with our animal topic. We made a fun sensory farm in our classroom today and the children went around and visited all the different animals. We had shaving foam sheep to shear, we had some rubber glove cows to milk, and some squeaky clean piggies who all needed a roll in the mud! There were also eggs and feathers that needed collecting... We learnt that being a farmer is a very busy job and that they have to work very hard indeed!

As well as tending to animals down on the farm, we have also been looking after the wildlife in our playground by making some very lovely bird feeders, using pipe cleaners and cheerios, which I am sure that the birds are flocking to... they are obviously just flock while we are not watching! Maybe we'll experiment with some different kinds of food and see which ones the birds like best!

Don't forget that Tuesday is Parents' Evening. It's not too late for an appointment if you haven't already asked for one. Just let me know by Monday which time slot is preferable for you.

Have a wonderful weekend!

Rachel ☺