

27th September 2019

Hello!

Another week has whizzed by and Robins Class continues to be as delightful as ever.

Today we went to Owl Class' coffee morning, which they held to raise money for Macmillan Cancer Support. A big thank you to everyone who contributed cakes and spending money! The cakes were scrummy and Owls Class did a great job! They will let you know how much was raised in due course when they have had time to count up all the cash!

We have done some baking of our own this week – we made some very delicious flat breads. We added seeds and raisins and chocolate drops for added deliciousness and, I have to say, they tasted as good as they looked! We sampled them during this morning's snack session during our regular Friday Toast session. Delicious!

Next Thursday (3rd October) is Robins Class' Art Day this term, We will be working with Becky, our Artist in Residence, to explore how Art is a fabulous way to relax and enjoy ourselves. It will be a very play based event that will involve making and doing and sticking and gluing! It is going to be great and I can't wait! We are not anticipating that it will be a hugely messy event (no messier than we usually get in Robins, anyway!) but please can you send n some old clothes for the children to change in to – just in case we decide to get creative with loads of paint! ☺ (We won't! don't worry!)

There will be Junk Modelling during our art day with Becky – so we need loads of empty boxes of any size and shape, so that we can stick them all together and make something awesome! If you could raid your recycling and send in any empty cereal boxes, egg boxes, card board tubes from the centres of kitchen rolls etc. then that would be very marvellous – thank you bazillions!

And, finally – don't forget that school photographs are happening next Friday (4th October)! I promise that we will not do anything messy until we have had our photos taken! If you would like to send in a comb or a hairbrush for your child then we'll give them a bit of a brush and a polish if they need it, before their photograph is taken!

Wishing you all a wonderful weekend

Rachel ☺
